FOUR BASKETBALL TEAMS IN TOURNEY

EVERY PRECAUTION WILL BE TAKEN NOT TO CONFLICT WITH ELK-MOOSE DATE.

Latest advices from Principal Bernard Street at Las Vegas indicate that but two teams will enter the basketball tournament from the extreme South. Las Vegas and Bunkerville have enrolled their squads and these with Manhattan will play off the tournament.

Should no more schools enter, every effort will be made to crowd the schedule into two days, so that there need be no conflict with the Elks-Moose baseball game. It is regrettable that two very important sport events should conflict, and every device will be employed to avoid a rival performance at the high school. If possible the baseball game will be made a part of the high school's jubilee, since all of the Elks' share will go toward the improvement of the children's playground at the school.

The services of Mr. Silas E. Ross of Reno have been secured to referee the different games of the tournament. Mr. Ross has been graduate manager of athletics at the University of Nevada for the past four years, and in addition has coached the Nevada basketball team through five very successful seasons. Mr. Ross is considered the foremost authority on boys' rules in the state, and his opinion commands great respect at all Pacific coast conferences.

AN OPPORTUNITY AND DUTY SHOWN

POTASH AS A BY-PRODUCT MAY BE FOUND IN DRILLING OPERATIONS

Well drillers in the United States may find an opportunity to discover potash as a mere by-product of drilling for other materials. This opportunity, which may be called a duty and which should not be unmissed with interest, only requires that the driller shall watch the drill cuttings and salt waters brought up by his outfit and suitably cooperate with the government in its search for potash.

The advance in price of potash salts from the normal rate of about $40 to over $400 a ton since the outbreak of the war makes still more evident than before the difficulty as well as the duty of finding this indispensable commodity somewhere within our own vast domain "while the country waits." The United States geological survey has devoted a part of its energies to the investigations of rocks and minerals containing large percentages of potash and to the search by the drill for beds of potash salts that have been buried during different geologic periods in the evaporation pans of certain dried-up ancient inland seas and lakes. The work done has included the testing of brines and bitters from many places, especially from salt-producing fields, and the examination of drill cuttings from wells.

It is practically certain that beds of potash salts, if they exist in basins in the United States other than Seale's Lake, Cal., were laid down in geologic formations that include beds of common salt, gypsum, anhydrite and like minerals, just as they were in Germany and Spain, though the beds may not be so thick. The formations laid down in those ancient seas and lakes, which by their evaporation deposited thick beds of salt and other minerals, therefore probably afford the best promise of yielding salts rich in potash.

Beds of rocks salt and gypsum occur in large areas in the United States. They are found in the salina rocks of New York and Pennsylvania and in other formations of about the same age, laid down in Michigan and Ohio during periods of great aridity. In southeastern Michigan a bed of rock salt 900 feet thick is said to have been found by drill holes. Dense brines or salt deposits are found in carboniferous strata in West Virginia and other eastern states, in the "red beds" of the southwest and the Rocky mountains, in the cretaceous deposits of several of the western states, and in the tertiary strata of the far south west. In many of these regions there may have been areas where the evaporation of the water bodies precipitated potash salts as well as common salt, though in most of these areas, as in most of the more recent western lake beds, the potash was abstracted and jealously secreted by the clays of the muddy waters, and so deposited in the shales. In some of these salt-depositing areas, however, the conditions were no doubt at some time favorable for the laying down of blankets of potash salts that were later buried beneath other formations. It is unreasonable to believe that in every one of these evaporation pans the potash was diffused, and that no

BATAVIA SYSTEM IN MODIFIED FORM

METHOD ADOPTED TO PARTLY OVERCOME DETRIMENT OF OVERCROWDING

The city board of education and the superintendent have spent much time and thought in thoroughly investigating a number of plans looking to the good of the pupils in the several overcrowded rooms. It has been found difficult to divide the congested rooms and employ more teachers, as the board would have liked to do, because it seemed impossible to get desirable quarters for such new grades.

The school authorities are fully alive to the fact that a teacher with fifty pupils can give little or no individual attention to the weak pupil, and that, as a consequence, there would be pupils to fail of promotion in the spring who, under proper conditions, should pass. To avoid this contingency the board has adopted a modified form of the batavia system. A special teacher will give individual and small-class coaching in the particular subject or subjects in which the pupil is in danger of failing. This will not by any means insure the promotion of every pupil, as there are bound to be in any and every school a few pupils in each grade who, because of ill health, or irregular attendance, or lack of application, or because the work of the grade they are in is too difficult for them, will fail of promotion. But by this means the pupil who is in danger of demotion because of lack of a little timely individual help will have plenty of opportunity for promotion if he applies himself. The teacher for this line of work must necessarily be one who has a wide knowledge of the requirements of the course of study, as she will have occasion to coach pupils in various subjects in each of several grades, particularly the fifth and the seventh.

The board feels they have been fortunate in securing for this work Miss Doty Tipton, who is a college graduate with much successful experience in both grade work and high school work. Miss Tipton will begin her work in Tonopah about April 8.

where throughout the widespread and diversified salt beds of different geologic periods in this country was potash thrown down in beds comparable in size to those in the Old World. The United States is still a young and large country, and the search for potash by the drill has just begun. Drillers in private employ are boring in hundreds of places for oil, coal, water, and other minerals in areas never before touched by the drill, and they have hundreds, possibly thousands, of opportunities to find beds of potash. The discovery of potash in commercial amounts on a claim, lease, or farm might be far more valuable than the discovery of an oil pool or a mine.

BUTLER THEATER

Lionel Barrymore, who has been starred in both stage and screen productions, and Irene Howley, the talented young actress, who was in the all star cast of "The Moth and the Flame" and other big features, will be seen at the Butler this evening in "The Yellow Streak," a five-part feature brimming with romance, thrills and human interest. In addition to the two stars, the cast contains half a score of noted screen and stage artists. "The Yellow Streak" is gripping throughout the entire five reels; there are many interesting scenes of New York City, and life in a picturesque mining community; also a group of real cowboys, who figure in an important part of the action, is an interesting feature of the production. Mr. Barrymore plays the part of a careless wanderer with a dual personality, that of a sky pilot among the miners, and a noted highwayman and outlaw. The preliminary reel, which will be run ahead of the feature, will be Pathe Weekly. Tomorrow, Paramount Travel Pictures, and "Chimie Fadden," a Paramount production, presenting Broadway's cleverest comedy star, Victor Moore, in a screamingly laughable picture version of an Irish-American comedy drama.

Remember that on Saturday, "The Battle Cry of Peace," the first night show will start at 6:30 prompt, instead of 7 p. m.

A COMMUNICATION

Editor Bonanza, Sir:—Now that the board of county and town commissioners is in session, I would suggest that this is an excellent time to arrange for the filling of chuckholes in the streets, the ground being soft. If the sand and gravel are applied now they will pack and the result will be a permanently smooth surface.
